

Cruiseport BOSTON Fact Sheet

- | | |
|--|--|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ★ The Port of Boston has been a vital transportation and economic resource for New England since the 17th century. ★ The Black Falcon Cruise Terminal (BFCT) is New England's largest international cruise terminal. ★ The Black Falcon Cruise Terminal was named after the Black Falcon cargo ship that caught fire in 1953 causing nine longshoremen to lose their lives. ★ In 1985, the BFCT Terminal was opened and 13 cruise vessels carrying a total of 11,723 passengers called Boston. ★ 94 cruise vessels called the BFCT during the 2003 season and 97 vessels called the BFCT during the 2004 season. 100 vessels are scheduled to call Boston in 2005. ★ Boston continues to grow in popularity as a cruise destination and as a port of embarkation for Bermuda, Canada/ New England, Caribbean and Transatlantic. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ★ In 2005, for the first time, the BFCT will offer regular cruising from Boston to the Caribbean. ★ More than fifteen different cruise lines call Boston with port of call visits and embarkations. Boston is homeport to three cruise lines: Norwegian Cruise Line, Holland America Line and Royal Caribbean Line. ★ Massachusetts is ninth in the nation for cruise industry expenditures and accounted for $325 million in direct spending. ★ On average 2000 passengers will pass through the BFCT when a ship is in port. ★ Each passenger generates between $500-$1,500 for the local economy. ★ The cruise season at Boston's BFCT runs from April through October. |
|--|--|

